ABOUT

SPILL THE BEANS

Spill the Beans is a local coffee and bagel shop in the heart of The Gaslamp specializing in fresh baked California-style bagels and innovative cream cheeses. They also serve up local coffee roasted by Dark Horse, scratch made syrups and a couple of lunch sandos to serve the afternoon crowd. Looking for something healthier? They've got you. Chia berry bowls, loaded oatmeal and cold pressed juices are popular choices. Executive Chef Kevin Templeton and Pastry Chef Karina Orozco have created bagels that are doughy and downright delicious. Swing by 555 Market Street every day to try them out for yourself!

OWNER

ARON LANGELLIER

A veteran of the food and beverage industry for 22 years, Aron Langellier has opened 10 restaurant establishments throughout his career. Opening number 11, Spill the Beans is his first where he carries the title of owner.

Aron ventures to Spill the Beans from barleydash, Gaslamp's high-energy hot spot where he holds the position of operating partner. Here, Aron is the driving force behind the productivity and efficiency of the restaurant that is often filled to capacity.

A proud Aztec, Aron journeyed to San Diego from Temecula to attend San Diego State University. However, his roots are in the Midwest, having moved from Illinois when he was just four years old. Aron fell in love with California and never left.

His success is due to his unwavering motivation to create an everlasting experience. He revels in the fact that people are enjoying an encounter that he and his team have created. Aron appreciates that guests choose to spend their rare, spare time at a location he conceived, and he wants to ensure their experience is pleasurable one.

During his free time, Aron serves as the first vice chair on the Executive Committee of the Gaslamp Quarter Association. He can also be found catching a nearby comedy show with his wife, or checking out new restaurant openings in the city.
